

Chapter 23

Latvia

STUART BURNSIDE

BURNSIDE FAMILY

Around 1994, Jorgen Johansen, the national director of OAC in Denmark at the time, traveled to Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, where he met with a number of people in the Lutheran Church in Estonia and Latvia. He was able to conduct some additional visits together with other people from Denmark. Beginning in 1995, OAC Denmark sent teams of young people to Latvia and found a strong base of operations in Kuldiga, a town in the western part of the country. In Kuldiga, the Baltic Evangelistic Summer Team (BEST) began with a training seminar followed by lots of outreach in various locations. Starting in 1998, Ole Christensen served as an evangelist, splitting his ministry time between Denmark and Latvia. In 2000, a board was formed; its aim was to launch OAC Latvia. From 2001 to 2004, Poul Nielsen and his Latvian wife, Solvita, served, and in 2005, OAC Latvia was officially established by Stuart and Ceinwen Burnside. Following their training in Newtown, Wales, they moved with their three children (Bethan, Shannon, and Catrin) to Riga, Latvia's capital city. In the challenging years that followed, Stuart did a good job of organizing teams in several locations around the country, held training events, established a prayer network, and developed links with churches. The Burnside children also participated in ministry, using their varied gifts to present Christ through sketchboard illustrations, puppetry, and high-impact visual object lessons. The work in Latvia received substantial help from Sarah Ilsters of the Salvation Army, who helped establish a base and office in the center of Riga. A national committee was formed, and OAC Latvia became an autonomous nation in the OAC family.

Eventually, Martins Busmeisters and Inese Komela joined the staff. Inese brought with her considerable skills learned during her time with Child Evangelism Fellowship. Several teams were established, and a ministry called “Superduper” also began, geared to reaching families and reaching out to orphanages. A ministry called “WOW Puppets” was used to reach kindergarten-age children. In addition, a team known as “Reality” ministered in the school system, and an open-air evangelism team called “One Way” came into being. Several ministry groups were also established in other areas of the country. These workers consisted of the Latvia team based in Riga, Star of Hope in northern Latvia, and the Revelation team in central Latvia. OAC evangelists from the UK and other countries visited to support training and outreach, seeking to raise the ministry's profile and equip the teams.

DAVE & SUE GLOVER

In 2009, after serving as the national director for OAC Great Britain, Dave Glover and his wife, Sue, continued their OAC involvement in Latvia. As chairman of the board of directors in this country, Dave encouraged the growing ministry of national workers. He notes, "Serving as UK director heightened my awareness of OAC evangelism around the world. That's why it is important to encourage travel for effective world outreach. Creative evangelism tools are relevant to all cultures. Yet, it's more than just innovative tools; it's a mindset. Communicating the good news of Jesus means engaging with people in a wide range of circumstances. Many of us go to schools, prisons, and ships. I've preached in remote African villages to full churches at midnight with the illumination of a single candle! Closer to home, I've taken part in sport days where I've spoken about my faith."

In 2014, Stuart's ministry in Latvia came to an end. He moved back to Wales, and our OAC contact then became Inese Komela, who was on staff with OAC Latvia from 2012 to 2014. She has since become a children's worker in her local church. Several additional team members continued in ministry with the Salvation Army, and the skills learned during their OAC years were used fruitfully. In recent days, Torben Ostermark of OAC Denmark has been reaching out to Latvia. In 2017, 2019, and 2022, he trained many children's workers and some evangelists, and is hoping to set up Reach the City and train more evangelists and children's workers in the years to come.
