

Chapter 16

Germany

OAC Germany has a rich heritage and a lot of history. Much of this history is found in Jim Duffecy's 1983 edition of "Truceless Warfare Advances." To recap some of this history, we remember an American named Keith Rudkin, who served in the military and was stationed in Germany during the Korean War. He married a German lady named Eva and felt a desire to reach the German people for Christ. In preparation for that ministry, he and Eva returned to the States, where Keith attended Asbury Seminary. While a student there, he was exposed to two guest speakers representing Open Air Campaigners, Les Werry and Jim Duffecy. After listening to their presentations, he felt the Spirit telling him that this was the way to reach the Germans for Christ! After several years of working as a US staff member and ministering to Germans who had settled in Cincinnati, he felt ready to make the big step. In 1963, he and Eva moved back to Germany, founding what was called "Freiversammlungs Mission" in the name of Open Air Campaigners. German Christians joined him. Among them were Horst Ludwigs from the Torch Bearers Bible College and Emil Boehnke, who used three pet monkeys as evangelistic tools! Ministry began to be held in several places in Germany, including Cologne, Munich, and even the crossing point between East and West Berlin during the Cold War named "Checkpoint Charlie."

KEITH RUDKIN

Keith and Eva settled in Wuppertal. This city had been a center of Christian activity since a revival in 1849. Training seminars were held, as well, in a huge 35-room building the Lord had given to them, which also became an ideal conference center. Among the students was a young Swiss couple, Kurt and Susanne Schafli, who would later join the OAC staff and open up Switzerland (see chapter 40).

KEITH RUDKIN AT THE BOARD

In 1967, at a Youth for Christ crusade, a young man named Ulrich (Uli) Hofius was saved. Uli started working with Keith as a volunteer until he finished Bible college, and then came on staff in 1974. Some of his first evangelistic experiences included conducting outreaches in Austria. He also took some summer teams to Vienna in the early '90s. He married Anne in 1976, and they have been ministering together ever since.

The collapse of communism in Eastern Europe, including the breakup of Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, quickly changed the map of Europe, with many of these countries joining the European Union. OAC Germany received many requests from churches in these countries to train their people in evangelism. When Germany reunited into one country after 45 years on October 3, 1990, Keith was able to minister to Russian soldiers in the barracks in Eastern Germany before they were withdrawn. Many of these soldiers took the gospel back to their own countries. Uli and Anne had already been working secretly with East German churches before the change. They were now able to use their contacts to help these churches with evangelism training so that they could reach out in their local communities.

ULI AT THE SKETCHBOARD IN HUNGARY

Uli took over leadership of the German branch in 1992 and was subsequently officially appointed as an OAC International Evangelist. In these roles, God has used him to train and minister for many years in the following countries: Austria, Switzerland, East Germany, Hungary, Romania, Yugoslavia (Serbia), Croatia, Czech Republic, Slovakian Republic, Russia, Estonia, Latvia, Poland, and Ukraine. Today, he continues as the director of OAC-Missionsteams in Deutschland e. V., which translates into English as "OAC Ministries in Germany." Through the years, staff members have included Hendrik Hofius, Frank Heinrich, and Dorothee Kluitenberg.

Uli and Anne began reaching out to the Gypsies (Roma) in Southern Hungary in 1986. At first, there was no fruit until around 2012 when the first Roma came to Christ. Since then, many Roma have trusted Christ and are following Him. From this small group, several house churches have been formed. Rev. & Mrs. Georg Bayer are now permanently working there, partly supported by OAC Germany. Before this, a Roma couple, Mr. & Mrs. Jozseph Olah, worked for a short time. Several times a year, Uli has the opportunity to visit Hungary and minister to them.

Work is also taking place in Slovakia, which is covered in chapter 36.

Regarding modern-day evangelism in Germany, Uli writes, "Street evangelism, in the traditional sense, is no longer as easy as in former times. People in this generation aren't as open anymore and only like to stop briefly to hear what we have to say. However, there are still good opportunities during city festivals and similar occasions. In such situations, we are happy to help local churches be present at such events and reach people in their area."

Although Uli and Anne are the only full-time OAC staff currently in Germany, they do have a wonderful core of volunteers who minister with them. They work closely with local churches, Uli often has opportunities to preach and help equip folks to reach out into their communities. They also run seminars on sketchboard preaching and other methods of evangelism. Additionally, Uli speaks in Bible colleges and helps different organizations train their people in effective open-air outreach.

In the summer, Uli and Anne offer young Christians the opportunity to participate in three missions which provides the opportunity to experience outreach so that others can learn about salvation. These three missions take place in June at Kiel Week, in July at the campsite at the Ulmbachtalsperre, and in August at Lake Balaton in Hungary. With over three million visitors, Kiel Week is the largest folk festival in northern Germany. In a fascinating maritime atmosphere, Uli and Anne lead the team in conducting creative missionary activities on the waterfront. The group is housed together for the entire week and enjoy the blessing of being a unified community.

SUMMER WORKERS REACHING THE BEACH CROWD IN HUNGARY

At the Ulmbachtalsperre campsite on the edge of the Westerwald, they organize effective children's programs and live on the "Kirchwiese," a meadow in the middle of the campsite. There, Uli and Anne also hold programs for youth and adults, and every Sunday morning, church services are held in the open air.

The Balaton (Plattensee) in Hungary is the largest inland lake in Central Europe. There, they conduct children's programs on the beaches in the afternoon and programs for adults on the waterfront promenades in the evening. All these programs are translated into Hungarian, so Hungarian and German tourists can be reached simultaneously. As a team, they live in a holiday home on the southern shore of the lake.

PLENTY OF OPPORTUNITY TO SHARE THE GOSPEL IN KIEL

In Northern Germany, a big sailing regatta takes place during the Kiel week festival mentioned above.

During this week, ships from all over the world arrive, and about 3 million people attend the event. The whole town is also filled with festival activities. There is a long promenade where they have held open-air meetings every year for the past 30 years! The OAC Germany office prints special tracts to distribute and have team members help them with this outreach.

At another annual event called Stünzelfest, about 15,000 people show up to view animals of all sizes in a village with only 70 inhabitants. This event has been taking place since 1832 near Bad Berleburg. Uli and Anne conduct programs to explain the gospel to children and adults amongst the rabbits, hens, cows, horses, sheep, and a host of other animals! The sketchboard heading (right) says "Right or wrong" and different statements, such as: God is dead / People will go to heaven / Jesus lives / I'm a good person / Forgiveness is secure. God has provided many opportunities to share spiritual truth with people using this method.
